McLean, Virginia

My dear Misses Thorne and Scattergood:

I have read with interest your recent letter to Mr. Dulles concerning the possible location of the Central Intelligence Agency on a portion of the Bureau of Public Roads property at Langley, Virginia. Careful consideration is being given to various sites and as yet no final decision has been made.

The proposed location of the Headquarters building on the Bureau of Public Roads property is a considerable distance removed from your residence. The boundaries of the proposed area to be made available for the grounds surrounding the building would not infringe on your property. In the event it is finally decided to construct the Headquarters building at the Langley site, I should like to assure you that everything possible will be done to avoid inconvenience to you.

Very truly yours,
